

Diana Karpman is professor of pediatrics at Lund University, Sweden. She obtained her MD at Sackler School of Medicine and her PhD at Lund University. She combines clinical duties in the field of pediatric nephrology with research and teaching. Her research focuses on novel molecular mechanisms of, and treatment options for kidney diseases utilizing laboratory models and patient samples. Dr. Karpman is a member of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences and a Wallenberg Clinical Scholar. She heads the Skåne Center of Excellence in Health.